The Red O'Reilly Auto Parts Banner defines the look of our digital branding.

This element was crafted with consideration to our global brand. It carefully considers the appearance of our most public-facing elements such as Store Exterior, Event Signage, Product Labelling, Store Interior, and our fleet of trucks. Not only are these assets the most well established and widely seen representations of our brand, but also would require the most investment to change. It is for this reason that our digital effort strives to adhere to the clear branding standard already established by our company.

It can be described as a red banner containing our logo. The treatment of the logo is that of the one seen on our storefronts and event signs across the nation. The red background mirrors the application of background color seen on O'Reilly storefronts, event signage, and product packaging. The angled stripe treatment of the background mirrors the stripes seen along our ceiling in all of our stores, and that appears on the side of all of our trucks. The angle is matched to that of our product packaging. The O'Reilly log is centered vertically, and auto parts is aligned to the baseline and the x-height.

Color Swatches

The Digital Color theory is based on our the colors used in our Global Branding, and borrows principles that all motorists have ingrained from their daily interaction with traffic signals.

Green Means Go.

It is used anywhere that a customer can click to go somewhere. Green is a very soothing, confidence-building color, thus we use it as our isolation color for links and calls to action.

Red means Stop! Pay Attention!

It is used anywhere that we really want the customer to pay attention. Red is a very attention grabbing color, thus we use it in our branding (just like we do on our products, store design etc.), Our prices, and our savings call outs.

Greys are Neutral.

Greys are used for everything else. Grey is a very modern, professional color, and it's neutral tone allows our products, photos, calls to action, and attention grabbing colors to really stand out!

The O'Reilly logo is based on the Helvetica font face. Our current retail standards use the Helvetica Neue Lt Std Condensed family heavily, and we strive to follow suit in the digital world.

The one exception to this rule is in those cases wherein we are functionally unable to utilize the Helvetica family due to licensing costs.

In instances where we hope to render the font as closely as possible to the Helvetica family while still rendering web text that is readable by search engines, we use a combination of Open Sans Condensed Bold and Oswald Heavy.
